It is with great pleasure that the Class of 2008 dedicates our yearbook to Commander Henry Lamb

From the first time you talked about tubies to the telling of the last sea story, we have enjoyed every minute of our time together. Your words gave us hope that even we youngies could survive freshman year and some day graduate. Your teaching did not stop with valves and steam, you also taught us about life. You gave us inspiration, knowledge and your time; you were not only a teacher but a friend to many and even family to some. There is not an engineer or even a cadet from this academy that you have not inspired, and each of us is a better person because of you. It is no wonder why all cadets refer to you as Grandpa Lamb.

"The thoughtful soul to solitude retires."
-Omar Khayyam (1048-1131)

The Class of 2008 would like to recognize the retiring members of the Academy Staff:

Cdr. Joseph Domingos
Cdr. George Gillis
Captain Allen Hansen
Dr. Joseph Marone
Skip Thompson

The dedication and commitment of these individuals over their many years of service have made lasting contributions to the campus. They have set an example for all who have served with them and paved the way for the successful future of the Academy. We wish them smooth sailing into their golden years of retirement.

Congratulations on a job well done!

The Class of 2008 has set sail for distant harbors; never to be together again. That fact brings great joy as we all celebrate the culmination of the hard work by the members of the class and the faculty and staff who worked alongside of you over these past four or more years. But it also brings some sadness as this completes your time in training here on the Buzzards Bay campus - your home during this important part of your development and you must leave your shipmates and mentors behind. A ship in the harbor is safe but of course that is not why ships were made.

I am very proud of each one of you in the class. Some years ago you made a very difficult decision to buck peer pressure and chose something completely different for a college. That took true courage. During the intervening years you have experienced times of excitement as you made new friends, learned new skills and saw new places. But there were also tough times when you again had to summon your courage and on Sunday evenings leave the safety of your home to return to the demanding crush of five years of college jammed into four. You routinely waved goodbye to family and friends from the decks of ships, the windows of cars, or the doors of airports but saying goodbye never became routine. It always hurt a bit. During these past years you have grown tougher, more confident, better prepared. You have stood taller as you mastered the skills of your trade and the wisdom gained from experience. I am particularly pleased to be able to witness your successful completion of the rigorous undergraduate curriculum and, for the cadets in the class, the very difficult regimental leadership program. After weathering the storms and steering past the rocks and shoals at one of the most difficult college choices in the nation, you have sailed into the harbor of your dreams. Waving goodbye to you will hurt a bit, but I am proud of what you have become and wish for you the very best on your new voyages.

Best regards,

Rick Gurnon
President, MMA
Rear Admiral, USMS

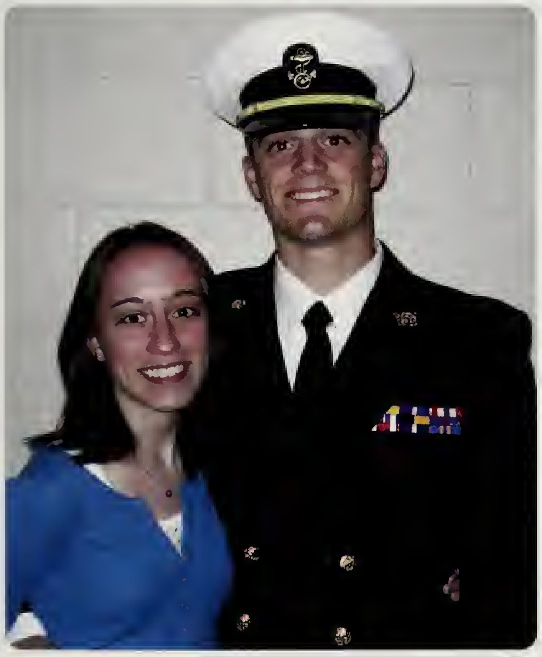
To the Class of 2008:

All of the Morning Formations, whether rain or shine, have become a blur, inspections are a thing of the past, and four years have passed with the blink of an eye. All we are left with are the memories. The time has come for us to leave MMA, for many not soon enough. I truly believe that we have left our beloved Academy better than when we arrived.

We have been through trying times and have stuck together. None of us could have made it through all the tough times alone. We came in as individuals and are now leaving as the Class of 2008. I hope that all of you will carry this aspect of teamwork with you for the rest of your lives.

I know that you all will go into the working world and do great things. There is no limit to what you can accomplish. I wish all of you the best of luck in all of your endeavors. I leave you with a quote that sums up MMA. "Nights we will never remember, with friends we will never forget."

Have a Buccaneer Day,
Joshua J. Weidman
Regimental Commander 2008
Massachusetts Maritime Academy



On that beautiful day of August 15, 2004, we took our first step. We soon would realize that Cape Cod had its country clubs, UMASS had its girls and MMA had its Youngies. We were confused, excited, cocky, nervous and insecure. We were, however, here!

The Commandant's staff invited us into the gym, telling us how the Maritime would be. In less than twenty minutes, we learned the truth. As we walked through the gym doors, we were met by an explosion of officers yelling phrases at us that we didn't understand. We soon discovered that not only was there a right way and wrong way to do things, but there was also the Maritime way (which was impossible to get right).

We endured two weeks of waking up before the sun, PT, marching, water survival, firefighting, classes, and all things maritime. Orientation graduation almost seemed better than high school graduation, but we still had an entire year of existing as "youngies".

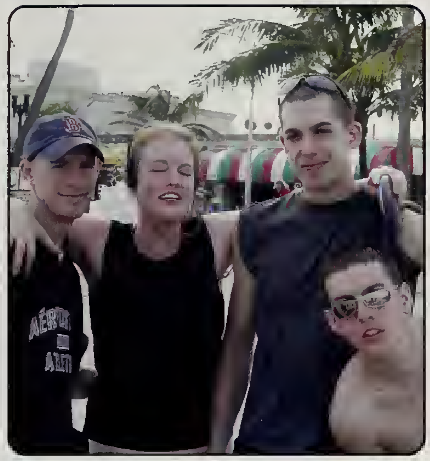
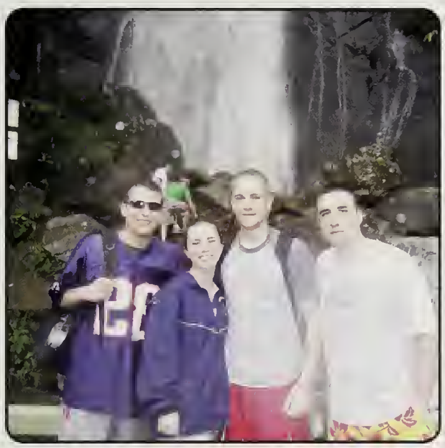
Cadet candidacy is an experience that no one in their right mind would want to live through twice. On October 16, 2004, we were finally recognized as fourth class cadets. We would no longer have to talk in third person, square our corners, or run to class. Three days later, the Red Sox won the World Series, and we were running once again. Cleaning stations, inspections, classes, study hours (and of course shenanigans) filled our weekdays and by the time Friday came about, we couldn't wait to leave for the weekend.

We wouldn't realize until the spring how when we were forced to watch the ship get towed away during orientation, it would be the best thing to happen to us in our often painful youngie existence. Our first semester lacked detex rounds, maintenance and all other forms of misery associated with the ship.

We were one of the last classes to celebrate Halloween the Maritime way, where the seniors tricked despite taking treats from the freshmen. We were unofficially welcomed into the regiment on December 9, 2004 when we were awoken "Orientation Style" by our company staff at zero dark thirty, PT-ed and ran into freezing cold Buttermilk Bay.





After the holidays, we arrived back on Taylor's Point far earlier than our friends at "real" colleges, ready to embark on the journey of a lifetime. Our ports of call: New Orleans, Puerto Rico, Martinique and Tortola. We spent a week onloading enough food and supplies for 6 weeks on a ship and we were ready to go, but the ship was not. We would remain in Buzzards Bay for an additional week, while the engineers struggled to figure out why the ship wouldn't move.

We finally departed a week late, and all we could say of the "Big Easy" cruise was it was neither "big" nor "easy" nor did we ever make it to New Orleans. Our first Port of call turned out to be Fort Lauderdale, which doesn't sound much like New Orleans, mainly because its NOT. We all spent our days on A1A, enjoying the beach.

After leaving sunny Florida behind us, we made our way to the 51st state, which turns out to be Puerto Rico, where English was spoken less than fluently. Some of the most popular attractions were Senor Frogs, the Bacardi Factory, and the discovery of the duty free shop. The last of the previous list turned out to be much more painful than initially anticipated. Some even made it to the only tropical rainforest in US Territory. The rainforest greeted us well with a paved road and picnic tables, and reminded us of Jurassic Park. Minus the animals.

Continuing on our journey, we hit port at Martinique, a small Caribbean island not frequently discussed in travel guides. We soon found out why. It was Carnivale when we arrived. However, Captain Bushy did hold an emergency in-port briefing alerting us to the fact that the locals weren't as friendly as in other ports.

We watched the Superbowl aboard ship, in French, and departed for Tortola. Being the most stunningly beautiful place most of us had ever been to in our lives, we were immediately jealous of our shipmate, Albion Llewellyn. We spent our days at the beaches and our nights at the Bomba Shack. Tortola more than made up for all that wasn't Martinique.

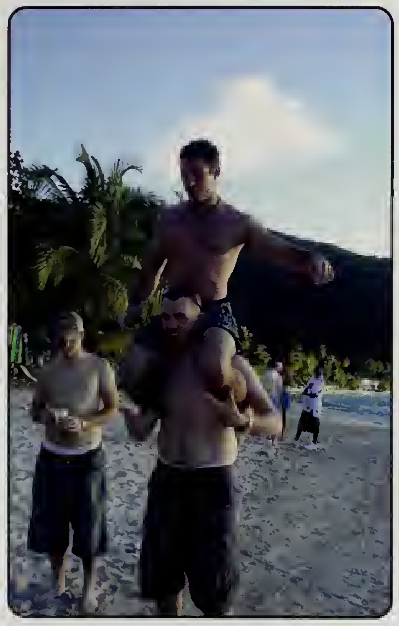
As we sailed home, we all left with nights in port we would never remember with friends we would never forget. Upon arrival at the entrance of the canal, we all joined the exclusive "Day in the Bay" club. Despite the cold weather, the crowd hadn't dwindled, and neither had the excitement of our arrival. Home Sweet Home!

Somewhere amidst all the hassles of freshman year, we started coming together, both as cadets and as a class. For the first time, we began to feel a little of the camaraderie of shipmates united in a single cause.



In the fall of 2005, the green taggers returned to the Maritime with a new swagger in their step. We were now 3/C. We watched from afar as the new freshmen nervously ran around campus, not realizing the true debauchery of the Maritime. This would be proven on Halloween, while US Coast Guard air support (we're talking helicopters AND jets) frantically searched the Cape Cod Canal for two cadets who decided it would be a good idea to form their own MMA Canal Swim Team. As it turns out, this would be not only their debut as a team, but the final race of the season. Moral of the story: if the canal current doesn't get you, the Wareham PD will, provided youre wearing a float coat.

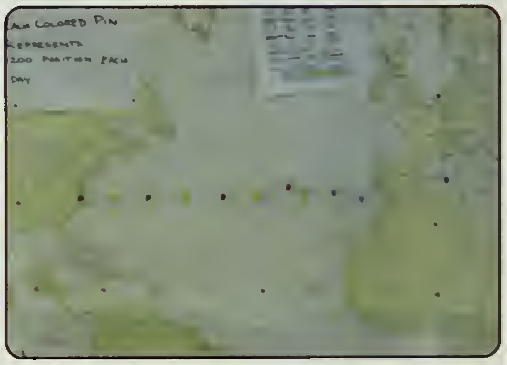
To the dismay of all on campus, weather on Taylor's Point in the early winter is absolutely miserable. As an example of the hate that Mother Nature lays upon our tiny peninsula: one afternoon, a pipe came over the PA System, "If your car is parked on the canal, you may want to consider moving it. The Canal is flooding." This transitioned from suggestion to order courtesy of Commander Page.

After surviving what turned out to be an early winter, our class's concerns turned to something entirely unrelated to weather. For the first time since orientation, the majors went their separate ways. Non-license kids were taking classes, doing co-ops, or skiing while the Deck and Engine kids "trusted" the mighty ship Enterprise to ferry them safely across the Atlantic Ocean.

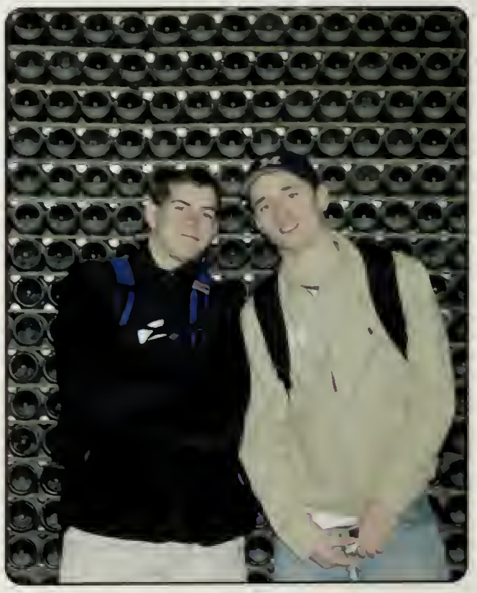
For the first time in the Enterprise's short history at MMA, it departed on time. One day later, we arrived at Mass Maritime's satellite campus in Norfolk, Virginia where we regained the comfort and security of being stuck, disabled, and broken at the pier for much longer than anticipated. Honestly, do you really think anyone on the ship really wanted to go to Madeira anyway?

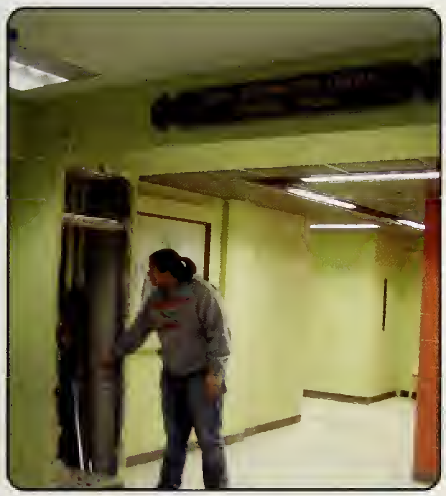
The ship completed repairs, and Captain Bushy assured us that she was "strong as a bastard", and ready to make the transit across the pond. It turns out that 14 days at sea might be 13 days too long. We finally arrived in Civitavecchia, and began to explore all over. Captain Bushy, as usual, held a pre-port briefing the night before reminding us that we were, in fact, guests in a foreign country, not an invading Army. On the second day, most of us decided that Rome would have much more to offer than the small city of Civitavecchia. After riding the bullet train into Rome, and during which we exhausted the phrase "mi scuzi", we finally explored a truly beautiful city. From ancient archways and architecture to listening to the Pope's address at the Vatican, Rome was incredible. The Pope's speech was moving, and in Italian. He said something that sounded like "Civitavecchia" and "mariners". Rumor has it that it could be loosely translated to, "Bless the citizens of Civitavecchia, for the mariners have invaded." After leaving the city that wasn't built in a day, we made the three day jog to Barcelona.

We arrived in Barcelona; we walked off the ship and saw Christopher Columbus pointing to the New World. As we walked down the main road, "Las Rambles", we discovered how much Spanish citizens enjoyed Michael Jackson by the numerous street performers impersonating the once popular King of Pop. Many of us took the opportunity to explore the countryside of Spain on the infamous "Codorniu Vineyard Tour." There were free samples. Others visited Monserrat, a mountain that towered over the countryside. We were served lunch in a beautiful building atop the mountain. Being in the wine country of Spain, of course they served us wine. Fifty minutes later, we returned to the city of Barcelona, which was our home away from home for the next few days.



As we crossed the Atlantic for a second time, the seas were calm, the winds were fair, and the cadets were slowly losing sanity as the ship made a steady 15 knots. Once again, we arrived in Cape Cod Bay, so close yet so far away. To add to the aggravation of being so close to home, the US Coast Guard paid us a visit to welcome us back to the country.





When we returned to the campus for the spring semester, we found ourselves living in Companies other than the ones we were born into. Our groups of friends had also been shuffled to all ends of Taylor's Point, leaving us with neighbors we had never seen before.

Some of us attempted to infiltrate what seemed to be a flawlessly run regimental system by becoming Petty Officers, respected by none and mocked by all. While some tried their luck at leadership, others chose not to, it's still unclear on who made the better decision.

As the seniors prepared for coasties and plastered the walls with signs reminding underclassmen to be quiet, the construction began. The construction started with the mere annoyance of tapping, easily tuned out with headphones. It quickly transitioned to jackhammers, removing the bricks from the buildings in which we lived. The usually quiet Taylor's Point sounded more like Baghdad than Buzzards Bay, with the frightening sounds of bricks falling from the sky and the occasional industrial drill coming through your wall while you attempted to nap in vain. It was the perfect continuance to a day that had already started off with our placid campus emulating the authentic gunfire and yelling of the streets of Fallujah, our neighbor to the east.

If the construction were not enough, one day, a windmill appeared. Standing at 242 feet, this monstrosity was Mass Maritime's attempt to go green. We could now gloat to our peers at UMass that Taylor's Point was hung like an albino yeti. The appearance of the Wind Turbine was an attempt to reduce the campus's electric bill by 25%, which required it to spin. However, it did NOT spin for the better part of 8 months. Damn birds. However, when it did start to spin, it made our campus truly blow.

After summer, many of us took on the responsibilities of being cadet officers. Although we knew it would be a tough challenge, we took it in stride and worked hard.

As we walked through CIC for the first time as upperclassmen, we realized the school had been hit by an Easter egg explosion of color. School officials assured us that the new color scheme was more "conducive to learning." The cadets knew, however, the real reason for the new paint job was to thoughtfully obscure from view the mildly offensive, but hilarious and uniting, murals that had covered the walls of our respective companies.

By the fall of our Junior or "Second Class" year, we felt like we were able to live like real college kids. We were free to come and go as we pleased, moved to the "other" side of the mess deck, had TVs and refrigerators in our dorm rooms and no longer had our mornings rudely interrupted by inspections.

That winter, our class went our separate ways, to all corners of the world. The deckies and engineers experienced what commercial shipping was like. Those cadets of the non-license persuasion enjoyed their own types of freedom working for legitimate business firms, cleanup companies, and facilities not only across New England, but across the nation. As we arrived back in the spring, we finally had sea stories of our own to share.

During the spring of our Junior year, the concept of graduation seemed like a legitimate possibility. Our class continued to endure a number of changes that the administration deemed vital to the well-being of the cadets. The first change would be the ship's color. Many of us cadets were tasked with painting the ship from haze gray to white to complete the seemingly endless hours of maintenance still owed. Also, all the grass was removed from the football field in an attempt to create the world's largest sand box. If having our grass taken away wasn't pre-school enough, by the end of the semester, they took our sand box away too, covering it with a lush new turf field. Construction on the dorms continued, still providing hours of entertaining background noise while two decks were being added to First and Second Company.

Despite the many changes our class endured, we still maintained "pride in our tradition and tradition in our pride." Keeping with that tradition, we went to the Prudential Center to celebrate Ring Dance- the marrying of our class to the sea. We enjoyed a lovely dinner with overpriced drinks while our Student Trustee, Matt White, took it upon himself to thank everyone who planned the event for a wonderful evening. Soon after that heart-felt speech, Dean Lima instructed us to dip our rings (which, don't forget, feature a turtle and the wind turbine) into the waters of the seven seas (and by seven seas, we mean Cape Cod Canal). As COMCAD and distinguished guests started to leave, so did the dress white jackets as we partied the night away. As the night ended, so did our roles as squad leaders as many of us took on the roles as senior officers.

Another short summer came to an end and bars or not, we were still seniors. We were now the "scary ones" on campus, improved parking and all.

After Christmas and New Year's 2008, we returned. No, really, we were back on January 2nd for Senior Cruise. We were now the CEs and COOWs of the watch, a distinction which was more than three years in the making. The deckies performed nautical magic with their triangles and dividers, while the engineers performed equally mysterious feats in the engine room. Every senior contributed to our making the sea term a great success (with exception to those non-license seniors along for a free ride).

Dare we say it... the Enterprise left on time. And we didn't stop in Norfolk for longer than anticipated. We made our way southward and headed towards the Pacific as we entered the Panama Canal. The transit through the Canal was a new experience for most of us, and we stayed up through the night to witness the entirety of the passage. We passed under the Bridge of the Americas and reached our first port, Panama.

We were welcomed by the Panamanian cadets who we had hosted at our own Orientation in the summer. They met us at the dock with smiling faces as we pulled into port .

Our liberty in Panama sadly came to an end and we headed to Golfito, Costa Rica. During the pre-port briefing, we were all informed about the Frontier de Panama, the black market of Costa Rica. We were kindly informed that if we ventured more than 8 miles from the ship, we could be arrested. As we disembarked the vessel and walked towards the town, we were met with a dirt road, featuring an abandoned steam locomotive and horses milling about. Unlike Panama, at least Golfito had beaches (that you had to take a water taxi to get to). Costa Rica also had one bar where all the maritimers gathered. This bar-turned-nightclub provided hours of entertainment for upper and lower class alike. One Student Trustee was even told to "...stop it right now, people are staring and some are taking pictures." Incrimnating photos have been appearing on Facebook ever since. The Enterprise left Golfito, and we steamed south to the equator.

As we were peacefully sailing south, someone who called himself "Davy Jones" announced that we were nearing sacred waters and we should turn back.

Days later, no longer pollywogs, we entered the Panama Canal once again. Once through the canal, we sailed east and arrived at "One Happy Island." In Aruba, the cadets learned that due to the influence of the US State Department, Carlos and Charlie's was closed. Indefinitely. The news was sad, but the beaches in Aruba were easily accessible, the night life was fairly entertaining, and many cadets participated in offroading and snorkeling tours set up by the school. The island was great, but most of us were running out of cash and were ready to go home.

Back north, we spent our final "Day in the Bay" before transiting the Cape Cod Canal for the last time aboard the T.S. Enterprise. Our last cruise was fun, but we were all glad it was over. The spring of 2008 saw us in the exalted position of last semester seniors, with all the honor, responsibility, and headaches that go with it. We spent our time in line at the Registrar's, consulting with the Optimal Resume program, but few had jobs at this point.

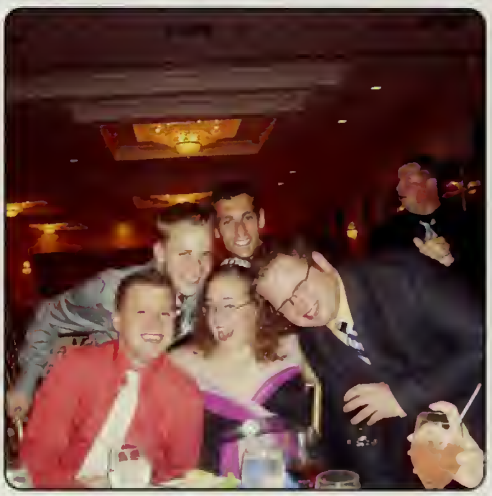
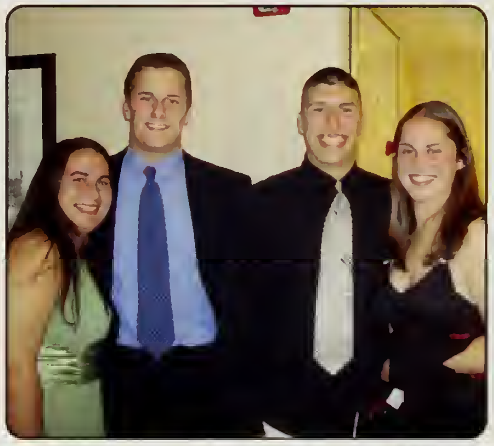
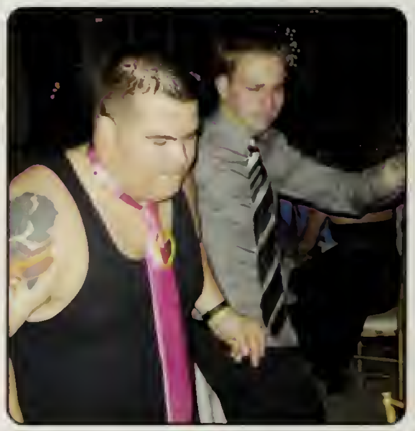
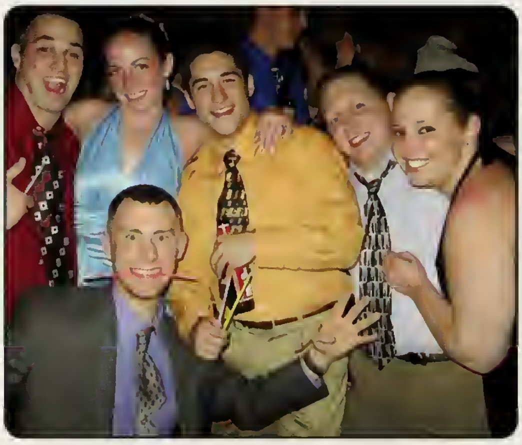
Then the time came for the self-proclaimed "real majors" to earn their stripes (or their Coast Guard licenses). For one week in the spring, every 3rd mate and 3rd engineer candidate existed solely on sugar, coffee, CFRs, and #2 pencils, while the underclassmen and those with "fake majors" did their best to keep quiet and leave those testing alone. Some emerged victorious, others in limbo, and a third group with more time to study and the opportunity to visit the lovely city of Boston.

With the chance to spend one last night together exercising certain skills that we had learned after four years at the maritime, we convened in Plymouth as a class to celebrate our coming departure from our adopted home of Buzzards Bay. With another motivating speech conducted by the illustrious Matt White, we ate, drank, talked, and danced until the busses came back to return us to our respective hotels, closer yet to graduation. On the subject of graduation, our leaders expertly guided us through an intensive Commencement practice the week before finals. This event proved to reaffirm all of our faith in the capabilities of those paid administrators who had guided us for the entirety of our undergrad careers.









On June 21, 2008, we marched on the parade field for the last time to receive that small square of parchment that has been our goal for four (or more) long years. And, like hundreds of others before us, we declare that we wouldn't trade our Academy experience for a million dollars, nor would we go through it again for two million.

I really don't know why it is that all of us are so committed to the sea BUT...
It is an interesting biological fact that all of us have, in our veins the exact same percentage of salt in our blood that exists in the ocean, and, therefore, we have salt in our blood, in our sweat, and in our tears. We are tied to the ocean.
And when we go back to sea -whether to sail or to watch it- we are going back from whence we came. ~J.F.K

Oh, MMA. One of those places where the seconds feel like minutes, minutes feel like hours, hours feel like days, days feel like years, and years feel like seconds.

To my family and Amber: But I wont forget the place I come from
To my people and the A-team: Let's make a resolution, let's always stay friends.
Though we may have our disputes, this family tree's got deep roots
To the Class of 2008: I hope that days come easy and moments pass slow, And each road leads you where you want to go
On choosing to spend 4 years at the Maritime: We only do it for the scars and stories, not the fame
On graduating: And I count it all as time well wasted
On the future: Don't know where I'm goin yet, but I sure am getting there

I still believe that everyone you meet teaches you something about yourself or the world. So, thank you.

The sea, once it casts its spell, holds one in its net of wonder forever

To the 4th co girls: A moment lives all of a second, but the memory lives on forever, thanks for all the memories

To the A-team: Nothing succeeds like the appearance of success, so thanks for all those Tuesday mornings collecting meaningless data (and all the coffee that kept us sane during it), and all of our other shenanigans.

To everyone else: Life is a journey constantly turning down an unknown path, I hope your dreams stay big and your worries stay small. Good luck to all of you!!

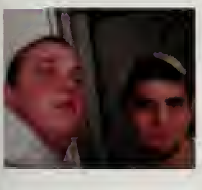
Justin Infanger

Four years of waking up early five days a week, Orientation, inspections, Viking bath, Hitch, BOB ROSS, the mural, sea term, the hedgehogs, 3rd CO nights, air mattresses, Mr. Potato Head, but I got Swedish Fish, sneaky sneaky sir, runway walks, late night movies, Eric's 18th birthday. Random dunks runs at all hours, going to dunks at 9 at night with JR and ordering 10 iced coffees and getting laughed at by the cashier, bonfires at the beach, grilling, the yard, slaps, the ladies man, The Retirement Community, random adventures, late nights, bad ideas 21st birthdays, The Shield, Orientation 2008, 5 flights of stairs, black mail, Winter 2008 3 Storer, New Years 2008, the Bruins with Tyler, Guitar Hero, NHL 06, golfing in January, the ships arrival, the start of spring semester 2008.



I would also like to thank my family for all of the support that they have given me over the past four years, thank you Mom, Dad, Derek, and Mark you guys got me through theses past four years and I owe you more than you could ever imagine.

For four years I woke up every morning , got dressed into my full uniform, formed up into a platoon and marched out onto the parade field to salute the flag of the United States of America and you know whatIm damn proud! GO BUCS!

I'll never forget Third Company, First Company and the true friends that stuck with me to the bitter end

My favorite memory of MMA was being in paradise with a pina colada while exploring The Baths in Virgin Gorda, British Virgin Islands

My Proudest moment came as the First Company Freshman Platoon Leader when I heard these words, And the winner of the marching competition isFirst Company!!! ~ I put my heart and soul into training those kids and it just showed that hard work truly pays off.

Mom and Dad: I love you
Grandad: Thank you for everything
My Family: Youre the best
My Friends: ITS PARTY TIME!!!

3rd Co. for life....

Well, this chapter in our lives has finally come to a close. It has been a memorable 4 years to say the least. Despite everything we've had to put up with, I can honestly say that this institution has molded us into the leaders and citizens we have become. Thank you Mom, Dad, Maggie and Bob, friends andfamily and Colonel Dilliplane for making this all possible.Now it is time to venture forth and do great things. Carpe Diem.

In the words of Jerry Garcia. Its been a long, strange trip. Well, I would agree with the long and strange part, for sure, but only sometimes. At the outset, I could never have forseen the direction that life would twist and turn over the ensuing months, but I wouldnt trade any of it for the world. Mom, Dad, Eric, Matt, Katie, Grammie and Gramps, you have been unflagging in your support of my life, let alone my choices, even when I felt like I least deserved it. I love you all and hope that someday, I can repay all of the kindness and latitude that you have shown me. Grampa, I wish you could have been here to see this day, as much as Ive wished that you could have been there to talk to about a million times over the course of the journey; Im pretty sure we could have had a good laugh trading Shellback storiesAlthough youve been physically gone for two and a half years, Ive felt your hand resting on my shoulder the entire time. Nick, Bob and Mike, you have all been a huge impetus in my life to make this directional change, thank you! Brock and Donald, you were awesome roommates, good friends and great people, even if one of you drinks fish oil! Julie, your grace and perspective have helped to make me realize that a tough choice doesnt have to have only one good ending. Amber Jean, I couldnt begin to fathom the depths of the mystery, but it sure is nice to be back from the doldrums; sometimes its better not to ask why and just be accepting of what is in front of you. Chris, Don, Drew, Eric, Ken, Marc, and Van, you all made the Sea Term what it became, the best time Ive had on that goddamn ship, bar none. Mike and Eric, you made the 5th Company experience all worth it, none of the awards would mean anything to me if we hadnt won them together. I have no way to convey how much you each enriched my life with your presence, and wouldnt repeat this year over again without either of you standing tall next to me! Dan salute! Chris and Melissa, I dont have the words to thank you for everything you have done for meyou are two people who are more mature at 21 than every 30 year old that I know. I wish you only the best and look forward to what the years ahead bring. Kerri Ann, Ryan and Sasha, youve made the world a more interesting place for me, the most important lessons in life are the most difficult to grasp; and youve all illustrated something to me that has formed a part of my being. you may remember my theory about the people that end up on your list; you each have your place on mine. To all whom Ive missed, Im sorry! Ive simply run out of space. Ill close with two favorite quotes: "There is nothing- absolutely nothing half so much worth doing as simply messing about in boats." Kenneth GrahameWhether you think you can or you think you cant, youre right. Henry Ford.

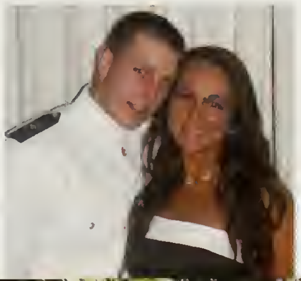
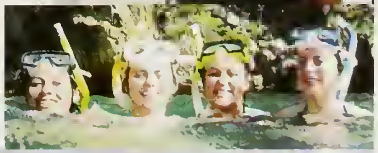
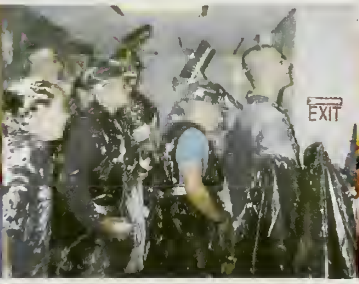
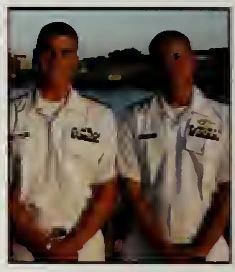
We are finally here! Good luck class of 2008. Lets hope our paths cross again. To my girls, you are my extended family and I love you. Bon fires on the beach, tanning top less, movie nights, and hittin the bars were all great times! Mom and Dad, thanks for pushing me so hard. Without you I would have never made it. Benny you have put up with a lot from me and I thank you for that. I love you. To the future sailors for MMA, work hard, sail hard and play harder. This team has offered me more than I could have ever dreamed of and I owe it to coach Fontaine and Macleod. Thank you so much for the opportunities you have given me I will always remember Bermuda, Germany and Jamaica.







Sean Sullivan



It has been a great ride these last four years; and by ride, I mean to the colleges that we frequently visited on the weekends. Dont get me wrong, maritime was fun. I enjoyed getting up at 0600 to clean heads freshmen year, but it was much more entertaining to pass out at 0600 at U-Mass. On the other hand, I would NEVER have enjoyed parting and hanging out with girls all the time, so in the end Im glad that I came to MMA.

Thank you to all my friends: Dan for the Waaaaaaaah, John for his cousin, Mike for Milwaukee, Matt White for being a fantail hero, Josh for the good grades, Betsy for doing the yearbook, Liz for the ride in the Camaro, Alex for bringing me to an all girls college, Theo for being the glue and Andy for dragging me out of a girls room while I was puking.

Big gulps, huh? Well, see ya later.

Band

At the time the rays of the dawning sun touch the campus, the Band signals the beginning and end of each morning formation. Without their drumbeat to guide the regiment, all would be chaotic; without their bugler, the American flag would rise unheralded above a silent parade field. They are the band; their heads held high, their stride noble, their notes lucid and their drumbeat steady.

Honor Guard

For many years the Honor Guard has been there to represent the Academy off campus, in uniform. Many times their tasks are thankless, and we often wondered, as they stream back late at night in dress uniform, what possess them. When asked, they often smile and say, "Hey, what else is there to do?" Whether it is because they enjoy firing rifles, carrying sabers, or even marching in parades, their time, practice and dedication will consistently bring credit to the Academy.

Stephanie-
Congratulations on all your hard work. You must be very proud of all you have accomplished. Being the Regimental TRO is no easy job. We are glad you didn't know there are things "girls" don't do- and you sure showed the boys. So what if they call you Captain Crunch, you will succeed in everything you do. And you can remind them that Captain Crunch, despite his braided uniforms and puffy eyebrows... is STILL A CAPTAIN! Never lose your sense of humor, it will keep you sane.

Dear Jenn,

One of the greatest pleasures that a parent can have is when they realize that their child has more knowledge or has developed more skills than they have. Think of it as one of our contributions to the world. Equally important, is the understanding that you have followed your heart, personal compass, and worked hard to plot a course in an area that you love and respect- the sea. To quote Jacques Yves Cousteau, "The sea, the great unifier, is man's only hope. Now, as never before, the old phrase has a literal meaning: we are all in the same boat." Best wishes on your life's voyage. May the wind be at your back,

With deep love and respect, Dad

Its been fun growing up with you throughout the years. Weve looked up to you, and we've respected you, but somewhere along the way you have become more than a big brother, but a lifelong friend to us both. We are so very proud of the person you have become, and it is an honor to be your brother and sister.

Love Always,

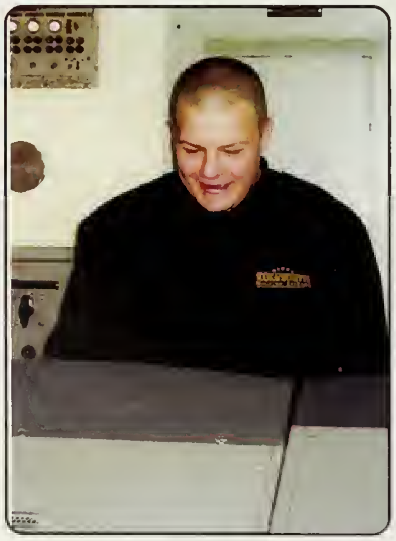
Rob Fritzen,

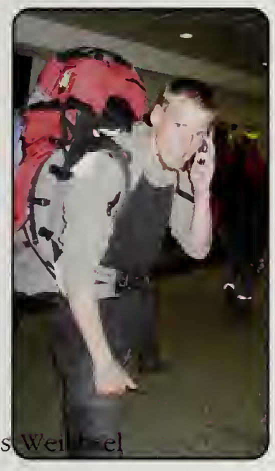
Congratulations on this great achievement and the return of your soul!
It is amazing how quickly the years have passed.
Not just the past four, but also the past twenty-one.
We should have known this would be your career choice.
Now if only they needed a candy store manager on an aircraft carrier,
You would have found the perfect job!

Words cannot adequately describe our pride.
You have always been focused on what was right for you,
True to your values and beliefs,
And patient but determined, in achieving your goals and dreams.
You are truly a joy and an inspiration to your family, friends and neighbors.

We wish you happiness, health and success as you begin this new chapter in your life.
Never lose your passion for the work you do, or the ability to find a bit of humor in each day.
Nurture and value your relationships,
And success and happiness will follow.

Never forget: you can achieve whatever you set your mind to;
We will always be your soft place to fall;
And
Never waste your money on cheap beer!
Love Always,
Dad, Mom and Danielle





"The pleasure of risk is in the control needed to ride it with assurance so that what appears dangerous to the outsider is, to the participant, simply a matter of intelligence, skill, intuition, coordination- in a word, experience. Climbing in particular, is a parodoxically intellectual pastime, but with this difference: you have to think with your body. Every move has to be worked out in terms of playing chess with you body. If I make a mistake the consequences are immediate, obvious, embarrassing, and possibly painful. For a brief period I am directly responsible for my actions. In that beautiful, silent, world of mountains, it seems to me worth a little risk."

Joseph Pritchard,

Four years ago you left the nest
And luxury of home
To study hard, Mass Maritimes
The place you chose to roam.

Success at orientation
Seemed to put you on your way
You hit the books with vengeance
Had success day after day

The average semester of credits
Was just not your style
You dove and jumped, both water and sky
Then Sea Term for a while

Emergency Management came along
New Major at MMA
You chose to meet the challenge
And make a difference in the world of today

So here you are, all dressed in white
On your Graduation Day
All polished up, degree in hand
With only the future in your way

Cant believe how quickly
Time has passed these last 4 years
Dad said Make us proud- you did
Mom tries to hold back tears

You see son, you have made our hearts
Swell big with love and pride
As you can see hard work pays off
The future is definitely on your side

Congratulations!
Thanks for being the son you are,

Happiness is watching your beautiful young daughter grow into a wonderful woman and friend. Do not lose sight of your dreams and world will open up to you if you reach out and grab it.

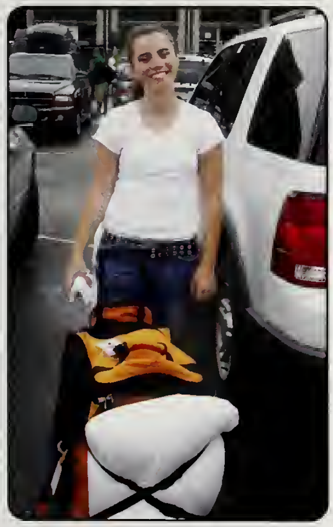
Love your Mom, Dad, Tim, Grandma,
Auntie Mary & Brendon



Kerri Berthelette

From Childhood to Adulthood you have given us so much joy.
We are so very proud of you and always will be.
Congratulations!
Love You,
Mom & Dad

To the Class of 2008:

It's been quite the experience these past four years with countless hours of watch, maintenance, inspections and maybe even an occasional class. We will take with us memories of friends and experiences that were shared over the years. The time has come for us to go our separate ways with whatever the future has to hold.

Special thanks to those who made the creation of this book possible. Liz, for countless emails sent trying to get everything together for the book; Sean, for graciously lending his camera to capture so many events; Lauren, for all her help with fundraising; Liz and Sean, for co-writing the class history with me; Pete, for his photoshop skills; Jim Watkins, Elizabeth Stevenson and the folks at McGrath Studios as well as Kerri Berthelette, Eric Chebator, Josh Engdahl, Liz Gondek, Kevin James, Jeremiah Kunze, Danielle MacPhee, Katie McClellan, Jenn Stone, Sean Sullivan, Mike Vibert, Josh Weidman and Andrew Zavatsky for submitting photos, without which would have made the publication of this book impossible.

As you flip through this book, and laugh at the memories, I hope that it reminds you of all that is MMA. The Class of 2008 was born in a sweatbox. Our mother was a hurricane and our father was the devil. After four years, be amazed at what brilliant things can occur when you "PUSH" yourself and remember that nothing in this world comes easy.

"Twenty years from now you will be more disappointed by the things that you didn't do than the things that you did. So throw off the bowlines, sail away from the safe harbor, catch the trade wind in your sails. Explore. Dream. Discover."

Sincerely,
Betsy Hackley
